Opportunities to read and learn at home are fundamental to improving children's learning, especially in the context of COVID-19 pandemic and its learning loss. Expanding access to children's books at Read@Home together with their parents and assistants is essential during this crisis and an intelligent investment at any time. The Read@Home program is providing reading, learning and gaming materials in languages, children understand hard-to-reach homes, using enhanced contracts to reduce costs and improve efficiency. Read more The house is also developing materials and activities to support parents and caregiver to read with their children. The initiative is aimed at families with children between 3 and 12 years old who cannot access books or other remote learning approaches. Read@Home supports countries and teams with just-in-time technical assistance to integrate country efforts to: (i) source, selection and quality learning materials for children in appropriate languages and accompanying materials for parents and caregiver; and (iii) improve efficiency and reduce costs in the supply and distribution of the book. The team has produced a range of global public assets, including: A global manual to help countries identify high-quality reading materials for use in homes, along with support materials for parents and caregiver, including monitoring and evaluation guides necessary to develop reading skills and motivation. The guide for authors, illustrators and editors in the production of these different types of children's books. Read@Home Guide to Incoterms and Insurance to provide practical explanations of the Incoterms range (term that regulate the responsibility of buyers and sellers who use international shipment) for the supply of books and the related insurance requirements. Ten successful factors in the supply of teaching and learning materials: the case of Mozambique to present replicable measures used in Mozambique to increase the efficiency of book contracts and reduce the costs of the textbooks and teachers' guides. The document illustrates ten success factors that can be used by other countries. Analysis of the book supply chain in the Republic of the Marshall Islands to analyze the steps in the book supply chain in the RMI and identify the strategy to guarantee timely to accessible reading and quality materials. Twelve countries participated in the first wave of Read@Home: Cameroun, Gibuti, Ethiopia, Kenya, Mozambique, Niger, Republic of the Marshall Islands, Marshall, Sudan, North Macedonia, El Salvador and Honduras. The text of the house is working with partners at national and global level, including the Global Book Alliance, Usaid, Unicef and various NGOs. The program is supported by funding from the Global Partnership for Education (GPE), the Reach Trust Fund, the Early Learning Partnership and the contributions of the country project. © 1996-2014, Amazon.com, Inc. or his affiliates, children are much more curious of adults. The potter's wheel has always fascinated people. Many children have not seen a potter working. Do you know how these wheels were invented and where? In the beginning, the pots were shaped by hand out of wet clay. Turning the raw lumps of earth on a wheel was developed later. The potter's wheel was invented in Sumeria, Babylon and also elsewhere in The Near East around 3000 BC. Clay pots had already been made for over 5000 years, but they were crude and broke easily. Making pottery items on a potter's wheel is a craft that requires a lot of skill. The potter needs skill not only in spinning the wheel and shaping the pot with his hands, but also in firing the pot in a kiln to harden it. Potters also learned how to glaze (coat) pots with various substances to make the pots stronger and more decorative and beautiful. The invention of the potter's wheel led to one of the first industries in the world - pottery. In earlier days, a skilful potter could make enough pots to exchange them for and other goods or sell them for money. Nowadays, vassurs make pots from the clay to sell them in exchange for money. The vessels are now available in various shapes, sizes and motifs. Some examples of ceramics were recovered from the ruined cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum which were buried under volcanic ash when the Vesuvius volcano (near Naples, Italy) broke out in 79 AD. Examples of amphorae (big ceramic jars) containing remains of what was once wine, were recovered from the ancient ships sank discovered at the bottom of the Aegean Sea. Frambra di ceramica and even some intact examples of ceramics have been found in almost all archaeological sites around the world. This shows that the knowledge of ceramics has spread to much of the ancient world. How do glasses help in clear vision? We often meet people wearing glasses. Wherever we go, you can locate a person with glasses at a time. Whoever has a weak view uses glasses. These days, there are available glasses that help you visualize both nearby and distant objects. Nowadays, lenses that adapt externally to the horn of the eyes are often used instead of glasses. These are known as "contact lenses". These lenses can be of different colors and are used by those who do not want to wear glasses, especially young people. The use of glasses began over 700 years ago. In 1266, Roger Bacon of England used a piece of glass to enlarge the words written in a book. This piece of glass has been cut by a spherical glass ball. Salvino d'Armata d'Italia is accredited with the invention of the first wearable glasses, around 1284. Please note.
